DEPOSITION ERRATAS

Background

You have been the point person for working with an expert witness on loss causation for your litigation team. The expert was recently deposed and you attended the deposition along with the partner on your case who defended it. A final transcript was just circulated to you by the court reporter.

You have 30 days to review the transcript and to correct any errors. To save your expert time, you are preparing a draft errata sheet to send to the expert along with the final transcript. You're in a jurisdiction that allows you to make substantive corrections if needed.

Instructions

Come prepared to discuss:

- What an errata sheet looks like;
- What types of errors you're looking for in the transcript to correct.
